The Political Papers Unit of LSU Libraries Special Collections holds the papers of retired U. S. Senator John B. Breaux of Louisiana. Due to the relationship between senators and their constituents, it is not uncommon for such materials to contain records of a sensitive or personal nature (descriptions of medical conditions or financial circumstances, for example) or personally identifiable information such as social security numbers. These types of records typically occur in the case files and constituent mail found in the Department and Independent Agency Files and the State Affairs Files but could also be found in other parts of the collection. Though every effort was made to identify and remove or restrict such items during processing, to ensure the privacy of individuals, researchers must agree to the following conditions before the collection will be paged:

- Any sensitive or personal information, such as that described above, may be used in statistical aggregate or as an example to illustrate a theme, with the stipulation that there be no identifying information pointing to specific individuals or families.
- No reproduction whatsoever will be made of sensitive or personal materials, whether by photocopying, scanning, photography or any other means. This stipulation applies to originals as well as microfilm reproductions of the collection.
- Publication of direct quotations of sensitive or personal materials as described above must not include identifying information pointing to specific individuals or families.
